Avoid Using Personal Devices for District Business

In early March, the California Supreme Court issued a ruling that determined that communications concerning the conduct of public business are within the reach of the Public Records Act (PRA), even if the communication is sent on an employee's personal device. What this means is that if employees use their personal devices, cell phones, laptops, tablets, etc., to conduct District business, these communications may be considered public records and must be retained in accordance with the District's Record Retention and Destruction policy (BUL-6825.0). The District is recommending that employees use their District email accounts rather than personal email accounts to conduct all District-related business and avoid using text messages on their personal devices to conduct District business. The District is planning to offer workshops in the next few months that will help District employees distinguish what is a public vs. a private record. For more information, please contact the PRA Unit at (213)241-7600.

"Let's Talk Friday" at Eastside Learning Center

The ESL students at the Skills Center participated in "Let's Talk Friday" activity on Friday, May 5, 2017. The objective of the activity was for the students to practice their English communication skills by giving instructions. The students created Mexican paper flowers and papel picado (a decorative craft made out of paper cut into elaborate designs commonly used in Mexico for decoration purposes during patriotic and holiday festivities) while practicing giving and following instructions in English. Some students mentioned that they realized that such beautiful and complicated-looking flowers were, in fact, so easy to make.
